an Interdisciplinary Journal for Science and Technology Studies

Science Studies is an interdisciplinary journal encouraging contributions from all areas of research devoted to the study of science and technology in society. Most recently the journal has published articles dealing with technology assessment, politics of the sociology debate, innovation studies, university-industry-government links and the sociology of expectations.

We are constantly seeking to publishing new and innovative approaches to studying current research trends in science and technology studies. Our selection of authors range from young researchers to established authors. Science Studies reaches a broad audience in over 80 countries and 700 institutions around the world. Science Studies is also available electronically through EBSCOhost.
